GOOD NEWS! St. Alexander Catholic Church has raised nearly $4 million of the $6 million needed to build the new church. This includes nearly $39,000 from 64 families at St. Elizabeth. Our goal is to raise $50,000 from our parish so we are only $10,000 away from that goal. Now there is a $400,000 matching gift, which means every donation from now on will be matched dollar for dollar. Also, you can now make your donation on credit card. Simply go to Parish Pay.com, type in St. Alexander Catholic Church and enter your credit card billing information. You can make a pledge or one-time contribution on Parish Pay. Thank you all for your generous support of our mission to help the good people of St. Alexander build a new church!

Like their Jewish forbears, the first generation of Christians were heirs to a promise: the Lord will come. At first, they expected the promise to be kept within their lifetime. When the world began to collapse around them under the Roman onslaught on Jerusalem, they echoed the anguished questions asked by Daniel's people during a brutal persecution of the city generations before: When will he come? How will we know the time is at hand?

Our world, like theirs, seems threatened with ruin. Nations brandish nuclear weapons at nations; economies rise and fall; whole populations slowly starve before watching eyes of the television cameras. Again we remember that we are heirs to the promise. Again we hear voices around us clamoring to know if it will be kept in our lifetime. When will he come? How will we know?

Hidden beneath this global anxiety may lie some awareness that for each of us the world is indeed passing away. With every experience of loss, with every sign of illness, with every hint of age, we are reminded that we personally are heirs to the promise. It will be kept in our lifetime. When will the Lord come for us in death? How will we know?

The ambiguous answer to the first generation of Christians is given to us. We must seek the signs of the kingdom in our times and in our lives, but we must not become preoccupied with predictions of the day and the hour. It matters far less at what moment the Lord will come than how he will find us living the gospel on his arrival.

Reflection Mark 13:28-32

We are approaching the end of the liturgical year in which the readings take on an eschatological flare, meaning that they are focused on the end of times. Jesus suggests that when the end is near, we will know it by the signs that are taking place around us. We read in the Book of Revelations of the great tribulation that will accompany the end times. It does us no good to fear the apocalypse; rather, it should inspire us to work for the perfection of heaven on earth. If we saw the dawning of God's Kingdom of peace in our world, the earth, as we know it, would certainly pass away. Challenge yourself to perform one act of love in the week ahead that could help bring the Kingdom a little closer.
