Human beings are so essentially physical that even our language of the spirit derives from our bodies. To be a member of an organization requires that we be incorporated into that organization. Publications of societies are said to be organs of these groups.

Jesus and his Church have a keen grasp of this reality in the celebrations we call sacraments. Sacraments address themselves to the Church which is Christ's Body and to individual members of that Body. The source and summit of all the Church's life is professed to be the celebration of the Eucharist where the Body of Christ partakes of what it is.

On this Sunday we celebrate our identity as Christ's Body. On this Sunday we profess our belief that the life-giving and life-supporting blood which flows among us is Christ's very life. On the Sunday we direct our attention to the symbol which makes all symbols possible.

The earthly language of bodies and blood fills the scriptures. But those same scriptures proclaim that the pouring forth of blood is unto the nourishment of God's people. Flesh, blood, bread and wine are the products of destructive processes which bring them to human tables as food to sustain a family. Christ immersed himself in those processes which brought him to the table of the human family as the one food and drink which changes the eater into the eaten. In him we truly become what we eat and drink.

Reflection

Jesus said, "give them some food yourselves." Then he takes what they have, blesses it, and shares it so the crowd can eat and drink. This is the same fourfold action that occurs during the Mass. Jesus is asking the disciples to do what he will do, give us food himself. When we celebrate the Eucharist, we become one with Christ's Body and Blood. When we eat his Body and drink his Blood, we commit ourselves to be broken in service and poured out in love, feeding others with Christ's presence.
